Event Description

The place was Rome and the year 1510 when the first book ever on India was published by a European. The Bolognese author Ludovico De Varthema, left Venice in 1502, travelled extensively to the east of the Mediterranean Sea and reached the Indian peninsula, where he stayed for a long time. He chronicled his journeys in the volume first published in 1510. The exhibition contains a large number of contemporary cartographic images and dwells on other curious and fascinating aspects related to plants, animals and trade in the great Asian peninsula.

Event organized by Archivio di Stato (National Archives), Rome; Biblioteca Casanatense (Casanatense Library), Rome; Biblioteca Nazionale (National Library), Florence; Biblioteca Nazionale (National Library), Naples; Galleria degli Uffizi, Florence; Principe Prospero Colonna (Prince), Rome and Istituto Italiano di Cultura.
